

Robert Puentes, Brookings Institution

Robert Puentes is a fellow with the Brookings Institution Metropolitan Policy Program in Washington, D.C., which is redefining the challenges facing cities and suburbs in America and promoting innovative solutions to help communities grow in more inclusive, competitive and sustainable ways. Mr. Puentes' work focuses on the broad array of policies and issues related to metropolitan growth and development. His recent publications include: "One-Fifth of America: A Comprehensive Guide to America's First Suburbs," with David Warren (2006), and Taking the High Road: A Metropolitan Agenda for Transportation Reform, with Bruce Katz (2005), among many others. He is a frequent speaker to a variety of groups, including business, civic and political leaders; a regular contributor in newspapers and other media; and has testified before Congressional committees. Prior to joining Brookings, he was the director of infrastructure programs at the Intelligent Transportation Society of America.

Mr. Puentes holds a master's degree in urban planning from the University of Virginia.
